The mudac inaugurates its new exhibition space, Le carré, with Jean Tschumi Designer. This exhibition, created in collaboration with Vaudoise Insurance, focuses on a specific aspect of the great Swiss architect's work: his furniture design for Le Cèdre, the headquarters of Vaudoise Assurances in Lausanne.

With the headquarters of Vaudoise Assurances in Lausanne, Jean Tschumi created a true architectural masterpiece. His design, both rigorous and subtly nuanced, aspired to transparency, lightness and openness. It is a Gesamtkunstwerk – a total work of art – in which architecture, art and design come together to form an ensemble of rare harmony and exceptional quality.

As part of the restoration of this iconic building, Vaudoise Assurances entrusted the Swiss design studio BIG-GAME with the task of reissuing the furniture Tschumi originally designed specifically for the site. The Jean Tschumi Designer exhibition showcases these re-editions – armless armchairs, a round marble and iron table, an office chair and a small side table – produced by the renowned Swiss furniture manufacturer Girsberger (founded in 1889), alongside the original pieces carefully preserved by Vaudoise Assurances.

These ensembles are accompanied by extensive documentation (photographs, films, archival material) tracing the genesis of the project and the designer's thought process.

Period archives place the furniture back in its original context, while contemporary documents shed light on the challenges involved in their re-edition: adapting them to current production methods, material and aesthetic requirements, as well as contemporary standards.

Since the construction of its headquarters by modernist architect Jean Tschumi in 1956, Vaudoise Assurances has cultivated a close relationship between architecture, art, and institutional identity. This vision, still very much alive today, has shaped a living heritage that accompanies the company's evolution.

Designed by Jean Tschumi, the Vaudoise headquarters exemplifies a holistic approach in which the building, furniture, colours, and artworks form a harmonised whole - a true expression of corporate architecture. This philosophy has been sustained through the Artistic Commission, active since 1955, which continues to enrich the collection by supporting contemporary creation while enhancing the company's architectural and artistic heritage.

Recent renovation works have revived the site's original spirit, notably through the restoration of clocks, drinking fountains, mural paintings, and sculptures. Within this context, several emblematic pieces of furniture designed by Jean Tschumi have been reissued in collaboration with the Swiss design studio BIG-GAME and the company Girsberger. Faithful to its tradition of openness to art, Vaudoise also integrates contemporary works, extending the dialogue between past and present.

The reissue of these long-lost pieces of furniture was first grounded in meticulous research, during which we cross-referenced the information contained in the available drawings, plans, and photographs, and verified it with great care. Our aim was to adopt the most faithful method possible, in order to reproduce these pieces using contemporary techniques while strictly respecting Jean Tschumi's original designs.

— BIG-GAME

Our main challenge was to translate, with absolute precision, the spirit of Jean Tschumi's original drawings into a contemporary realisation. Working alongside BIG-GAME and Vaudoise, we transformed this meticulous research into a material expression that is both accurate and faithful to the history of the site and the initial expression of its furniture.

Le carré, mudac's new exhibition space, covers roughly 90 m<sup>2</sup>. It offers the museum greater flexibility, allowing it, beyond its large-scale exhibitions that require lengthy preparation, to respond swiftly to current themes, to showcase works from its collection, to host external projects or to develop more intimate formats.

Designed as a genuine laboratory for experimentation, Le carré enables mudac to take a stand on contemporary issues while continuing its research work on the Archives du Design Romand. The Jean Tschumi Designer exhibition thus opens a new chapter in the history of mudac.
